Ohsui YAMADA was a landscape photographer who considered photography his true vocation and delighted in traveling throughout Japan to capture its scenic beauty. The Hakone Museum of Photography is a private institution established in April 2002 by Ohsui YAMADA's grandson, Katsura ENDO, a photographer who was born and raised in Hakone.

In addition to a permanent exhibition featuring photographs by Katsura ENDO of Mt. Fuji throughout the seasons, the 2F Gallery presents the Ohsui YAMADA collection and special exhibitions by photographers working in a variety of fields.

In line with its objectives of 'creating a blend of traditional Japanese and overseas cultures', 'promoting new talent' and 'presenting a space for expression through photography', the museum holds exhibitions of photographs by artists from both Japan and abroad, while working positively to facilitate artistic exchange in collaboration with overseas' galleries and institutions.

A fourth objective is, 'the promotion of intercourse of the heart through affinity and harmony', which we achieve through lectures, gallery talks, photography classes and other activities.

This 'intercourse of the heart through affinity and harmony' is also expressed through the architecture of the museum which was designed jointly by Masanori TOMII and Fukui YOSHIDA of HANMAUM architectural studio under the direction of Toshio YAMAMOTO.

As visitors enter the museum, they are greeted by an oval-shaped space designed to encourage 'intercourse through affinity and harmony', cocooning them in a feeling of peace and comfort.

The rich atmosphere of this space combines with the natural surrounding beauty of Hakone to promote our fifth and final philosophy, which is 'the invigoration of the five senses'.

We hope that you will come and visit the Hakone Museum of Photography, which resembles a microcosm, blooming in the heart of the forests of Hakone.
